Many Minds. One Group.

Mariella Vélez Martínez, MD, is a cardiologist at Memorial Cardiac and Vascular Institute specializing in advanced heart failure and transplant cardiology. Her clinical interests include cardiovascular pathophysiology and cardiac hemodynamics.

Dr. Martínez has always had a desire to help others feel better, improve their health and recover from serious ailments. It wasn't until her beloved grandmother developed valvular heart disease and heart failure that she became interested in cardiology. Now, her career is focused on caring for some of the sickest patients with heart disease.

When caring for patients, Dr. Martínez follows a thorough diagnostic process, getting to know each patient, listening to their experience, concerns and symptoms and investigating until reaching a diagnosis. Then, she tailors a plan together that best fits their illness, needs and preferences.

Before joining Memorial, Dr. Martínez was a cardiologist caring for seniors at ChenMed Neighborhood Medical Centers in Florida. She also has published and presented on various cardiovascular disease topics, including pulmonary hypertension and congestive heart failure.
